

Transcript: A brief history of the National Centre for Research Methods

The National Centre for Research Methods was founded in 2004.

We began by launching our methods training programme.

And we established the centre as a co-ordinating hub for research.

In 2008, we held our first Research Methods Festival.

And we expanded our cutting-edge research and training activities.

NCRM became a partnership when the universities of Manchester and Edinburgh joined the University of Southampton.

Over the next 10 years, we launched our library of free online tutorials, welcomed nine new training partners, tripled the amount of courses we run and launched our first online festival.

Now, we're connecting people in different sectors and helping them to innovate.

And as NCRM celebrates its 20th anniversary, we'll continue to equip researchers with the skills they need to make lasting impact.
